Label the pictures using these words :
eye, face, nose, path, roots, trunk

A central photograph shows a close-up of a Buddha statue's face, which is partially encased and surrounded by thick, gnarled tree roots. Five empty, rounded rectangular boxes are arranged around the image, with arrows pointing from each box to a specific part of the statue or the roots. The boxes are intended for labeling the image with the words: eye, face, nose, path, roots, trunk.
